DECEMUR PURITAN RUG, in which we hope to interest every man and woman who peruses this description, derives its beauty from the artistic and picturesque days of the Sixteenth Century.

During the long and sometimes lonely hours of that period, the maidens, in the absence of their lovers, found time hang heavily upon their hands. So they turned their thoughts to creation of artistic rugs. The industrious and artistic temperaments, descended to them from their Holland forefathers, stood them in good stead during their struggles and privations, and eventually opened a great market for the product of their dainty fingers.

Quite naturally their designs smacked of the quaintness of the time and the poetical tendency of their minds and to this is due the beauty of the Puritan Rug, of which we are now making a specialty worthy in every respect of our splendid new store home.

Close inspection will reveal the intricate, studious and almost solemn character of the many beautiful designs and those who are fond of romance and the days of long ago may pleture to themselves a quaint Puritan maid, weaving rug designs on the banks of a limpid stream while awaiting the return of her broad shouldered lever from scenes of sanguinary conflict and conquest. So these Puritan Rugs with their dreamy associations and the flavor of ages past and gone have more than an intrinsic value-yea, more, much more. This is not a business-like way of describing our rug, you may say, but you will appreciate our inspiration when once you inspect our many pretty pat-
